is America's 32nd largest industrial company.
With assets of $1½ billion.

He's not impressed by size.
Only by the size of the opportunity.

That's why we concentrate on career opportunities when we talk with a college graduate. We point to the kind of people he will be working with at Atlantic Richfield. Over 3,200 of our 16,000 employees have one or more degrees. We stress the variety of opportunities he will find in 76 cities in North America where our exploration, producing, refining, marketing and administrative activities are carried out. Plus the opportunities for creating in our four modern research centers. And now that Atlantic Refining Company and Richfield Oil Corporation have merged, there'll be even more opportunities for graduates in both Arts and Sciences. Interested? ## THE MACMILLAN JOB GUIDE TO AMERICAN CORPORATIONS

Complete Profiles of 260
Top U. S. Corporations

with capsule commentaries on job opportunities in 50 states and overseas for career-minded college graduates, graduate students, and junior executives.

edited by Ernest A. McKay

The easiest way to find out everything a young man or woman needs to know about many of the largest corporations in America: who they are, where they're located, what they require — and what they have to offer.

• Hundreds of technical and non-technical job opportunities.

• Annual sales, number of employees, facilities, benefits, products, degree requirements and opportunities.

• Index of companies.

• Geographical index.

• Index of more than 120 different academic backgrounds, required or preferred by employers, showing which corporations are hiring graduates with degrees in that area — especially practical as it names many companies the reader might otherwise overlook.
